Nominating Committee (NC)

Karen Carlson

I have been a clinical instructor in the Dept. of Communicative Disorders for 25 years and a long-time activist in academic staff governance affairs. I have been a member and chair of the Nominating Committee for two years and would like the opportunity to serve one more term. The success of the current committee is in the quality of appointments we've put on the slates of standing committees or have recommended to ASEC. Internally, the committee has generated worthy goals and a practical set of guidelines. We are more successful in attracting new participants to the committee work of this campus. We also see our role as nurturing the talent of those who are interested but not yet ready for elected positions. My reasons for wishing re-election are: to complete a user friendly Web site to help interested people find out about academic staff and campus-wide committees, to develop (with the Secretary of the Academic Staff) a more information-rich system to track committee membership, and to streamline the internal structure of this committee.

Laurie Mayberry

As a member of the Standing Committee for Nominations, my primary goal would be to encourage academic staff involvement in the many different committees. Committee participation is an excellent way to become familiar with governance issues. I have had the honor of serving on this committee in the last year and have enjoyed the work. Currently, I work in the Graduate School's Office of Minority Programs where I direct the McNair Scholars Program and coordinate the undergraduate summer research programs. Also, I am the Academic Staff Assembly Alternate for District 497. I have been an academic staff member since 1992. Prior to coming to the University I worked as a paralegal and in marketing.

Colleen McCabe

As a continuing member of the Nominating Committee, I can bring experience to the process of securing candidates for various positions in academic staff governance and shared governance. I have been at the UW (MACC/DoIT) for over 15 years, and have enjoyed involvement in ASEC, ASA, and the Academic Staff Appeals Committee. I have gotten to know many of you through participation in MASA and other committee work. I believe that we need to bring new people into governance positions and involve those in academic, research, and administrative units for best representation on campus committees.

Tori Richardson

I have worked on the UW-Madison campus since 1994. I first served in the capacity of an advisor in Cross-College Advising Service before moving over to the Office of International Studies and Programs in the capacity of Assistant Director of Academic Affairs. During my five years on the Madison campus, I have been very fortunate in working with many advisors and advising units. I have also worked closely with various student populations with the intention of making UW-Madison a welcoming and supportive place for all students. A couple of my past activities include working with International Students and Scholars Services in planning and facilitating orientation programs and helping in planning the annual Student Personnel Association conferences. Presently I am working with a group of advisors from across campus who are interested in creating a new group that would be involved in advocacy for advisors as a means to better serve students. I am also serving as a member of the Non Academic Misconduct Hearing Panel through the Dean of Students Office. Because professional development is very important for all academic staff members in their efforts to provide top quality service to students and colleagues at the UW-Madison, I believe that my participation on ASEC would allow me the chance to continue to push for such opportunities for academic staff. I also hope to use my position on ASEC to encourage more academic staff members to get involved in various academic staff committee opportunities around campus.
